Seven Things You Should Consider When Selecting a Lawyer for Your Personal Injury Case

- 1. Does the Law Firm return your phone calls/ emails within 12 hours?
- 2. Is the Attorney himself promptly available when you need guidance in your case?
- 3. Will the Law Firm assist you in navigating the medical care system and the insurance issues involved?
- 4. Does the Attorney have actual litigation and trial experience?
- 5. Are you asked to prepare a list of ways in which the accident harmed you so that the Attorney can understand and appreciate what effects your injuries have had on your daily activities?
- 6. Does the Law Firm provide regular updates via email and/or phone about the progress of your case?
- 7. When there is a settlement does the Attorney present options, including the economic risks that all litigation involves so that you can make a settlement choice? WHY HAS LIFE GOTTEN SO COMPLICATED?

Although this question can only be fully answered by a philosopher, I can provide an answer with respect to the complexities in negligence law:

COMPLEXITY # 1 The growth of multiple insurance coverages: health insurance, property insurance, PIP and Medpay insurance, liability insurance often leaves the injured person confused about which insurance policy to use or whether and how a claim under one policy offsets the ability to claim coverage under the other policy.

COMPLEXITY #2: The growth of sub-specialization in the medical profession and the out-sourcing of their billing functions. Bills are difficult to decipher and it is difficult to figure out who paid for what service and what that means in terms of a liability claim.

COMPLEXITY #3: The growth of different state laws and court decisions to respond to problems arising in negligence claims.

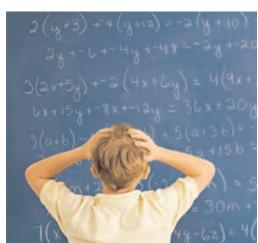

COMPLEXITY #4: Increasing population density in urban areas coupled with the quickened pace of daily stress and pressure in the 21 Century often leads to a lack of focus which causes accidents.

COMPLEXITY #5: The increase in size of insurance company personnel and the accompanying spread of voice mail so that no one can connect with the right person or any person at all.

COMPLXITY #6: Large corporations are often not sufficiently "safety conscious "as they become more concerned with luring "high-volume" traffic into box stores and football-size parking lots without adequate precautions for a large number of shoppers. We help all of our clients to navigate this maze by virtue of our experience and legal knowledge. Call us if injured!
